

CEPS Spring Lecture

Evil: Live Spelled Backwards

A one-woman cabaret presented by

Shanti Jones

accompanied by Stephen B. Wilson on piano

A lighthearted look at a heavy subject, "Evil: Live Spelled Backwards," paints a humorous picture that makes use of stories and songs by Irving Berlin, Randy Newman, Jerry Herman, the Beatles, and more. Over the past eight years, Shanti has performed shows on other philosophical topics such as optimism, love, wisdom, and humor. Her world-wide audiences include such far-flung places as New York, Greece, China, Switzerland, and India. When asked why she would do a show on such a strange topic as evil, Shanti replied, "The Devil made me do it!"

Shanti Jones, Ph.D., is a certified philosophical counselor in private practice in Taos, NM. Committed to practical applications of philosophy, in addition to her cabaret "philodramas," which she has performed world-wide, she has also published numerous articles on philosophical practice including The Art of Cabaret as Philosophical Practice, and The Transformational Power of Shared Written Reflections in Philosophical Counseling, among others

Thursday, March 5, 2020 3 p.m.
Jacobus Lounge, Brockway Hall

For further information contact:
Dr. Andrew Fitz-Gibbon Chair, Philosophy Department, 607 753 2016, fitzgibbon@cortland.edu

Sponsored by:
Philosophy Department,
Center for Ethics Peace and Social Justice
(CEPS),
Campus Artist and Lecture Series,
Faculty Development Small Grant

SUNY
Cortland